The '25 Cardinal

Foreword

We are now standing on the threshold of Life, looking forward to the future, but the time will come when we shall derive a great deal of our pleasure from memories of the past. In the hope that this volume may be representative of the spirit and ideals which we hope to portray, and that its pages may give pleasure to many; we, the Senior Class of Danville High School present this, the fourth volume of The Cardinal, to the school and its friends:

DOROTHY BEAVER

Pretty, demure, and sweet
Is Dorothy
Dreamy eyes of brown
Has Dorothy
Always ready and willing to laugh
Always ready to do her half
That's Dorothy.

FRANCES BENNETT

Frances is neat, cute, and sweet,
Slow but sure, quite demure;
Nothing worries her, nothing hurries her.
Everybody likes Frances.

HOFFMAN CULPEPPER

Here's to Hoffman, our jovial class sheik.
Nothing can rub off his good-natured smile.
He has won distinction as a member of the football and baseball teams.

LOIS BENNETT

Lois is just the kind of friend
On whom you always can depend;
She is sincere and loves her work,
Thus, nothing does she ever shirk.

*may you continue to radiate sunshine
don't forget - Boussseau?*

LOULA BOUSSEAU

Loula is not only one of the best old sports in D. H. S., but is a fine basket-ball star, also. She's full of pep, and whenever there is any fun, Loula is sure to be there. Because of her readiness to enter into all school activities, she easily won her place as the most school-spirited.

CELESTIA DYER

Celestia, quiet and modest,
With a dreamy eye,
We wish you all the happiness
In the days of bye and bye.

LOUIS FULFORD

Louis is what is termed "a good sport."
He is one of the best dancers in school.
His jolly good nature and kindly manner
make him liked by all.

She's so sweet and thoughtful. We all vote her a good sport. Her sincerity wins for her many friends.

HONORS:

Jefferson Literary Society, '24-'25
Chorus, '22-'23-'24-'25

Katherine Edmunds.

JOHNSY EDWARDS

Here's our big-hearted Johnsy, lovable, capable, and true. In her dark brown eyes there is always a mischievous twinkle. She graduated in expression at Averett College this year, and during her four years at old D. H. S. we have enjoyed her readings very much.

HONORS:

MARGUERITE LEA

With her very quiet way Marguerite is the sweet, friendly, and lovable girl, who is always ready to lend a helping hand. By the mischievous look in her eyes we know that she is full of fun.

MARION LOVE

Marion is a friend to everybody. She is one who is willing to help her fellow classmates in every way she can. She is lovable, loyal and true. Her quiet but sweet disposition makes us love her.

JULIAN MEADE

Julian is talkative—but who can deny that we enjoy listening to him? He has both literary and histrionic ability. We shall expect great things of him in the future.

HONORS:

Jefferson Literary Society
President Dramatic Club
Chatterbox Staff
Assistant Editor The Chatterbox, '24-'25

DORIS LUMPKIN

"Those smiles into the moodiest mind
Their own pure joy impart."

Doris is one of our accomplished girls. She plays the piano, knows both Latin and Spanish, and can work the hardest of the hard algebra.

HATTIE FRANTZ MEARS

If you want a true, loyal, dependable friend, you want Hattie Frantz. John Marshall High no longer has the honor of claiming this brilliant student, but Danville High takes great pride in claiming her. Although she has been with us only one year, she has caught the D. H. S. spirit.

As merry as a sunbeam
That shines from skies of blue.
Always kind and friendly,
Sincere and ever true.
When everyone else is gloomy
She radiates good cheer.
Oh! Gladys, kindly tell us
What we'll do when you're not here.

MATTIE McCAIN

Mattie is fair and golden-haired,
With eyes of lightest blue;
She is full of life and fun
With a lot of mischief, too.

LINDSAY AVERETT MOTLEY, JR.

Lindsay is one of the most likable persons we know. His sunny disposition and bright humor endear him to all who know him. And did we mention it? Lindsay is one of our shining intellectual lights.

A mischievous, yet winsome smile,
A merry heart? Yes, all the while,
A sweet and pleasing little face,
Plenty of pep yet full of grace;
A bright mind and flock of friends.
Her virtues—a list that never ends.
Peggy, as we know her so well,
It's the only answer we can tell.

MARVIN WATSON

In speaking of Nellie one would undoubtedly mention her sweet, quiet disposition. She is a true friend, and one learns always to depend on her.

RUTH WHITE

Ruth is a quiet, conscientious girl whom we value because of her dependability and happy disposition.

TO THE SENIORS OF '25

Come, come, all ye whose hearts are set
On this, the weary Present, to forget;
Come, where the Future's softening beam
Slowly begins its awakening gleam;
Come, see the things for which you long,
And hear the echo of your triumph song.

Dreams that haunted us come no more,
Dread visions have all passed away;
For we have passed out the open door,
And are free, forever and a day.

Those four years flit by as a dream,
Lighted by Knowledge's steady beam;
For some the way has been hard and long,
For many it has been one short, sweet song.

Memories we cherish, and hold dear,
Come floating in a varied throng,
Of the events of a gone-by year,
And of the days we would like to prolong.

But of all this 'tis said, "It has been,"
It has been, and will never be again;
We may remember, but we must still pursue
Our course, and begin to live Life anew.

Though we begin anew, let us cling fast
To the lessons the High has taught us,
The cardinal virtues, and others that last,
And in our struggle we will be victorious.

The time draws nigh, and we must part,
Our place to take in the crowded mart,
But it is with a full and aching heart
We tread the trails that lead us apart.

Visions that were distant loom near,
Sweet dreams fill our hearts with joy ;
Every thought is of the love and cheer
That we are now free to fuller enjoy.

Our thoughts are wont to rise and reach
Far beyond the narrow, crowded beach,
That, sloping down to a visionary sea,
Stopped many not so venturesome as we.

But out in the flowing tide of Life,
And wherever our many paths may end,
In the days of sunshine and of strife,
May we to each other remain a friend.

Though rough the path, and steep the way,
That leads us far from the sordid fray,
The thoughts of things that were before
Will keep us true, 'til Life is o'er.

While passing on in Life's ebbing tide,
And even now, in the flower of youth,
May we, as we struggle side by side,
Ever reach the Golden Sands of Truth.

Healing Time will soothe our heartache,
Forgetfulness all our sorrows quake ;
But in every heart there will be awake
Memories, each future joy to partake.

At last we see the Future, full and bright,
Rising from shadows, darker than night ;
We've struggled hard, we've won our fight.
Our goal is near, the call is clear,
O God, with Thy help we can respond
With not a tear, and never a fear,
When we draw close to the Great Beyond.

BOBBIE YEATTS.

Class History of '25

We never have felt so dismal and scared
As on that day to the High School we fared.

The old ones were there with their paddles so grim,
And we ran by with a run full of vim;

They laughed at our plight as we marched into school,
And we in our life never felt such a fool.

We herded together like scared little sheep,
And tried so hard the tears for to keep.

At last with the help of kind Mr. Hall
We removed our mourning, the dark Freshman pall.

Our Sophomore year was cheerful and bright.
We loved our dear high school, and for it we'd fight.

We teased the freshies. It was such great sport;
And then the girls we began to court.

We went to the games, and rooted, and yelled;
The championship for Danville Hi we held.

We passed our exams and even a test
Which of all things Mrs. Hill loved best.

Then we read Shakespeare; Portia was fine;
And then as Juniors we all stepped in line.

Our Junior year was big and splendid
The Seniors we helped and their plans amended.

Miss Hyla Bagley was our greatest friend,
And to her our love and honor we send.

We worked for honors at Charlottesville too,
We fought very hard, as we still do.

We gave to the Seniors a party, and bade
Them all to come; a good time we had.

In June they took their diplomas, and we
In their places as Seniors now could be.

Now we were Seniors. That magic word!
It's the dearest of all we ever heard.

We took our place and did our best;
We worked so hard on every test.

We pushed the Chatterbox right along;
We helped the Freshmen right their wrong;

We loved the Hi and Mr. Clarke.
At every game you'd hear our bark.

Miss Moore, our adviser, was strong and true;
When things went wrong she never was blue.

We passed mid-year 'xams; they weren't so bad,
And when they were over we were some glad!

The Juniors party we attended with glee,
And had the best time you ever did see.

Then came graduation, it seemed awful sad.
There were tears in our eyes, but still we were glad.

We were happy because we had done our best,
And in Danville Hi had stood the test.

Then goodbye, Danville Hi; your image we cherish,
Our love for you will surely never perish.

ELIZABETH TATE.

Class Prophecy

I'm not a poet,
I know it.
I'm better on prose.
So here goes.

Harken! Music, professor, please! Lo! It came to pass that the insane staff hath appointed me prophet.

Oh! yes, Mr. Kelly, Hot Tomalie.

As I gaze into the vast open spaces of the future, I the humble prophet—vision—

YEAR 1950

Lois Bennett is assisting Loula Boisseau in the writing of her new book, "Who Said Boloney First?"

Alice Carter! Alas! How cruel has fate been to her! She's Mrs. Horace Taylor now. Graham Cobb is a private detective. They say he knows what became of Sally!

Hoffman Culpepper is working for the city—parking down sidewalks and cutting corners. Yippi Dyer is taking Pink's place at D. H. S.

Julia Davis and Mary Hylton have adjoining padded cells at Staunton. On second look, I see Julia has eaten half of the padding in her cell.

Hartwell Harrison is now teller in a bank—tells the people which way to go.

Virginia Raine is now one of the end-girls in a Broadway musical comedy.

Robert Stembridge has a job as the human skeleton in a circus side show.

Margaret Holland is selling candy in the newly-erected five-and-ten-cent store.

Howard Gammon is in bed, suffering from paralysis and Saint Vitus dance at the same time.

Pauline Martin is seen picking posies on a Florida grape ranch.

Russell Myers was installing a giant dynamo at Stone Mountain, when a great crowd of buzzards grabbed him and carried him to the north country.

Frances McCain and her cousin, Mattie, are fisherwomen on the Nile River. They eat bird eggs and bacon in vast quantities for their meals.

Tucker McFall is a lone star ranger on the dear old river Chiceupaw. He scalps Indians and plays at quoits all the day long.

Alma Nall has the sleeping sickness; her husband, John Ragland, is greatly grieved.

Marie Noderer is the owner of a great gang of hound dogs.

Ethel Perkins is the wife of Julian Meade. She is very happy and eats prunes at four o'clock every day.

Marvin Watson, that two-timing baby is a cross-eyed comedian in the Follies. His baby-blue eyes have left a string of broken hearts behind.

Thelma Williams and Claiborne Martin are running a shoe store on Colquohoun Street.

Katherine Reynolds is a bathing beauty in a comedy which has replaced the old Mac Sennet.

Anne Ferree is a peppy waitress for the newly-erected Spencer's Cafeteria. She makes a good dumb waitress.

Lindsay Motley is working on the wrecking crew for the Danville Traction and Power Company.

Sam Reaves, on the verge of passing and graduating in old D. H. S., flunked English again, and is preparing to enter next year.

Glady's Meadow, married, divorced, married again, divorced again, is now dead.

Suzanne Holland is working in the Salvation Army. Believe me, she shakes a mean tamborine, too!

Tom Davis is in China endeavoring to solve the mystery of Hu Lung Dung. (Chinese mystery.)

Grace Mitchell is in the movies. She made the new Su Su Comedies what they are to-day.

Betty Travis is another human fly. She climbed the new D. H. S. building and only slipped once. She will never climb again.

Lemma Starling is living in the Alps, writing poetry. She has attained great heights in the literary world.

Helen Sides is a jolly little waitress in a Peruvian Hotel.

Rebecca Simpson is living in France. She has an important position there—International Bluffer. She competes with many French women.

Alice Turbiville is a great artist. The titles of some of her greatest works are: "In the Box," "By the Sea," "The Tomato Can."

Leland Walton is another Cleopatra.

Elizabeth Tate, wife of a notorious Danville bootlegger, who, by the way, is Louis Fulford, is very happy.

Margaret Arey sails to-day to join Tom Davis.

Gladys Hurd is now playing the organ at the Bijou. Poor Gladys!

Pauline Weber has almost learned how to drive a car by now.

Margaret Lea is on a tour of the west coast in search of sea bass.

Nathan Morgan is boxing instructor in the Danville Alms House.

Russell Riley has invented a parachute for balloon tires.

Julian Meade is a candlestick waiter in a Western mining camp.

Mary Franklin continues to vamp Conrad.

Robbie Yeatts is in the State penitentiary. Robbie says he doesn't care, as he get three meals a day and a bed.

Margaret Walton fell dead while eating unripe bananas.

Nellie White is traveling for Nanzetta's Medicine Show.

Dick Rogers is sailing for Italy; incidentally he intends to visit the Alps.

Before I go
I must say
Do not believe
Any of this bosh!

TO THE SENIORS

Oh, Seniors dignified and wise
To you a fond adieu!
With heavy hearts and tear-filled eyes,
We give our wishes true.

To speed you on your mission fair,
Our love we freely give;
And may your tears in life be rare.
May you in great fun live.

In all your ventures may you win,
And may you prosper long;
Some of you will be famous men
And right the world's great wrong.

So hold your purpose high in mind
And work for worth-while goals;
To all the world be true and kind,
And peace will fill your souls!

This freshman class is the largest that Danville High has ever known. Because of the size of the roll we were unable to print it. About a hundred and fifty pupils enrolled in September, and in February fifty more were added to our number. We have fully imbibed the D. H. S. spirit, and we support The Chatterbox and THE CARDINAL. We don't mind being termed "rats" as long as we can get away with the "cheese." We the Class of '28, have started out with high hopes and will try never to falter.

Waiting

HE Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away," remarked the kindly minister, as he placed a consoling arm around the old woman's back.

"But, Jack, my boy, my life," she sobbed.

Kirk Alston turned away quickly. He wished to hide the tears that would come, try as he did to suppress them. Jack Martin had been his boyhood chum, his college mate, and his "buddy" when overseas. His arms had caught Jack when he fell wounded in the attack on St. Mihiel.

For five years now he had seen Jack daily grow weaker and weaker as the result of being gassed. His death was almost more than he could bear. He mumbled a few words and placed an awkward kiss on the brow of Mrs. Martin, who had been like a mother to him for the past twelve years. With a sob he stumbled out into the glorious sunlight.

As he saw Mr. Chase getting out of a limousine he recalled the words of the old preacher. The sight of the man who had made his millions by war profiteering made him remember the words "giveth and taketh away." Yes the war had certainly done that. Formerly the Alstons, Chases, and Martins had all lived in unpretentious bungalows on Rosewood Avenue. The families had been very intimate, and he and Jack had taught the two Chase girls to play marbles, shoot air rifles, and fish. In high school days Jack had become Julia's steady and Kirk, Eleanor's. The young people in their crowd went around in pairs, so these two couples made a delightful foursome. Tennis, dancing, bridge—all of these—they enjoyed together. When Jack and Kirk left to attend the University, they corresponded with the two girls and invited them to all the college affairs.

Then America entered the war. The cry for men—American youth—was raised. Among the first to respond were Jack and Kirk. They volunteered, and were accepted immediately. They left amidst the waving of flags, beating of drums, and strains of "Over There." When Jack left Julia was wearing his ring, and Kirk took away with him the memory of Eleanor's first kiss and her murmured words, "Kirk, I'll wait forever for you; but do come back soon!"

At first the boys heard constantly from the girls, but gradually the intervals between the letters became longer and longer, and finally they ceased to hear at all. Both boys were severely wounded. After a long time spent in recuperation they returned home. No brass band or grateful countrymen met them; instead they were met by an air of depression and a general scarcity of jobs.

Yes, the white cottage was still there. But what of the Chases?

"Didn't you get my letter?" asked Mr. Alston. "I wrote about Mr. Chase making around two million by war profiteering. They left here and bought a large estate near town. They're in society now, and they don't even see us—they look through and around us. Money gets you anywhere, now."

"Julia?" asked Jack quickly.

"Oh, about two years ago she married an English earl. Fair enough bargain, it seemed. She got his title; he her money. But it didn't seem to suit her. Within six months she had a nervous breakdown, came home, got a divorce, and three months later married a French Marquis (the old man had made some more money by that time.)"

"Eleanor?" questioned Kirk fearfully.

"The family seemingly have tried to marry her off to almost a dozen titles, but she's obstinate and refuses. She drives a lavender sport car around town, dances, smokes, goes constantly, but never seems to be satisfied."

Jack had been broken-hearted, but Kirk had had more hope and planned to go to see Eleanor. He went to the large country house about two evenings after his return home. When he saw Eleanor he scarcely recognized her. Hennaed hair, rouged lips and bizarre clothes had all conspired to change her appearance. The room was filled with a crowd dancing to the music of a half-drunk colored orchestra; a cocktail mixer was in evidence; all of the girls were smoking. In great disgust he left; but the sad, unhappy look in Eleanor's gray eyes haunted him.

He had begun the study of law while in college, and tried to complete it now. He tried clerking, also; but the doctor prescribed outdoor life. He attempted manual labor, but was not strong enough for the work.

"A year's rest and no worry," prescribed the doctor.

"I'm just a good-for-nothing—a left over," mourned Kirk in his thoughts. He still limped; would he never be strong again? "No worry," said the doctor. How could a fellow help worrying when his heart was breaking over a girl? Forget her! No, that was impossible. So Kirk fumed and suffered in his soul.

As he limped up the street he wondered if Jack's fate—a broken heart, an injured body, a losing fight for life, and finally death—would not be his also. Sometimes Kirk thought that even death would be merciful. He suffered so much with his back! And he could never hope for relief except through an operation. The sum the doctor had mentioned had been in the thousands. It was a very delicate operation, an adjustment of the spine, and the cost would have placed a mortgage on the little gray cottage. Kirk had gritted his teeth and borne it—grinned, even!

To give him some occupation and to enable him to help expenses at home, Kirk had taken over the management of a railroad crossing. It was his duty to give the signals and to raise and lower the gates. Not much—but something to do.

He reached the little shanty by the railroad and looked at his watch. Forty minutes before time for the fast express to come through. He sat down to wait.

"Kirk, fix my wagon for me," came a small voice.

"Surest thing, you know," answered Kirk turning around and facing a small girl. Sally was a three-year-old cherub, with large brown eyes, curly light hair, and a chubby figure. She almost always had a sticky thumb in her mouth.

"Kirk, who made me?"

"God," answered Kirk mechanically as he fixed the wheel back on the wagon. This was a daily conversation.

"Does He make things happen?"

"Yes."

"And did he make Jack die?"

"Yes—I suppose so," choked Kirk, bending over the toy.

"Kirk, is you crying?"

Just then a lavender streak flew by, and a cloud of dust followed in its wake.

"Kirk, what makes your mouth jump at the corners, and your eyes shut every time you see that car?"

"Here's the wagon Sally," interrupted Kirk, as a means of diversion. But Sally refused to be diverted.

"Kirk, what's love?"

"What makes you ask that, Sally?"

"'Cause Mother said you used to love that girl."

Kirk winced; so even the neighbors knew of his broken heart. Sally left and went outside to play.

"That's about all I'm good for—fixing toys," thought Kirk bitterly. Remembering that it was time for the express, he switched on the "go" signal. Soon he heard the rumbling noise that signified the coming of the train. He strolled out to lower the crossing gates and turned around to look for Sally. Failing to see her, he went around to the other side of the shack. He caught a glimpse of a pink bow vanishing around the corner ahead of him. Sally thought they were playing "hide and seek," had run as Kirk limped after her.

"Bye, bye, Kirk," she waved a chubby hand, and pulling her wagon along, toddled off. Kirk gasped; she was going directly towards the track!

"Sally, Sally," he called. The roar of the train prevented her hearing him. He waved his arms, frantically beckoning her to come back. But Sally, thinking this was some delightful new game stopped in the middle of the track and cooed with delight.

Suddenly Kirk knew why he had been sitting there for months doing nothing. He had wasted all those days so that on this day of days he would be ready. Though he feared it would be too late, he pushed on the "Stop" signal. As he darted under the gate he did not see the lavender car returning down the hill at a furious pace. He heard the grinding of the brakes as the engineer endeavored to stop. He reached Sally, grabbed her, heard a crash, and knew no more.

"One of Fate's peculiar tricks" Kirk heard a voice say. "It required a very delicate operation to cure that injury to his spine. He couldn't afford an operation, but he is in a wreck and gets a jar that adjusts the difficulty perfectly! In a month he will be as well as he ever was. Such is life."

Two weeks later Kirk was sitting up in bed in the hospital. It was the hour for callers, and his eyes held a bright light of expectancy. Soon the object of his anticipation arrived—Eleanor. She was clad in gray; her hair was honestly brown, and her lips free from rouge.

"Eleanor," said Kirk, at length, "I'm so glad you came. They told me about your saving my life. It was so brave of you when you saw Sally and me on the track to drive your car in front of the train and save us. That engineer just did slow down in time. I can never hope to thank you."

"Kirk, will you repay me by saving my life in turn?" asked Eleanor abruptly.

"Of course."

"Then marry me. It may not be ladylike of me to ask you, but I'm so afraid you won't do it. You think I'm so proud and haughty, but, Kirk," and here she suddenly lowered her voice, "I've loved you always. When Dad made so much money, Mother developed corresponding social ambitions. She insisted that we sever all old relationships. I was young, and I thought perhaps she knew best. But when I saw what Julia made of her life, I rebelled.

"That night you came home, Mother came into my room and cried and made me promise not to see you. That's why I was so rude. But, Kirk, I love you and it was breaking my heart to do it.

"I couldn't stand it—it was breaking my heart. I wouldn't be a duchess or "lady" without love. I was coming to tell you that day when you were hurt."

The Dramatic Club has been one of the most successful clubs at the high school this year. It has in its membership the major part of the high school dramatic talent. Meetings are held every two weeks, at which time interesting programs are given, usually consisting of lectures, discussions of plays and their authors, readings, and music. Four one-act plays have been presented: "An Interrupted Proposal;" "The Maker of Dreams," by Oliphant Down; "Op 'o me Thumb," and "A Good Woman," by Arnold Bennett. More one-act plays and some longer plays are to be undertaken this year.

One of the greatest desires of the students of the Danville High School is to have student government. A beginning has been made towards this end by the organization of The Students' Coöperative Association. As the name indicates, is it not an organization for student control, but one for coöperation between pupil and teacher. This organization has two principal objects: First, to develop in the students a growing appreciation of membership in a self-governing community by effecting among the student body a wider diffusion of the responsibilities and privileges of self-government; and secondly, through unity of organization and increasing democracy of control to make Danville High School a better and finer high school. These objects are very broad, and they can be attained if the students will work and coöperate with each other.

This organization was formed in the early fall, and it has been successful as far as it can be judged now. Indeed, its success or failure depends upon the interest and work of the pupils. There are many benefits and privileges that can be obtained from this organization, but the students must realize that they must be willing to give their time and work.

The Danville Hi-Y Club was first organized in Danville in the year 1922 by Mr. E. G. Corwine, the secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. This Club had for its first president, Mr. Ralph Haga, who was then a Senior in Danville High School.

The name "Hi-Y Club" is a popular contraction of the words High School and Young Mens Christian Association. The "Hi" standing for the High School and the "Y" for the association.

The purpose of the Hi-Y Club is to create, maintain and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character. The objectives of the club are popularly stated in the following slogan: "Clean Living, Clean Speech, Clean Athletics, and Clean Scholarship," and this means contagious Christian character.

Just a friend, what more could one wish
O'Hwyman Red!

SALMAGUNDI

Young Willie to the town did go;
Hurry up that food, O waiter!
He vowed he would be a hero;
Danger! the elevator!
(Now, ain't this stuff a mess!)

He got a job as a drug clerk;
O fireman, save my child!
In all his duties did he shirk;
Cheroots are very mild!
(I made this up myself!)

He got kicked out of the big town;
Ain't we got fun, O boy!
He joined a circus as a clown;
Why are some girls so coy?
(Just one stanza to go!)

The moral of this tale you see:
Does Ivory really float?
"If you don't work, a fool you'll be."
Now, boys, don't rock the boat!
(Teachers, you've taught in vain!)

LINDSAY MOTLEY, '25.

DELEGATES TO COLUMBIA PRESS CONVENTION SPEAK IN CHAPEL

Daisy Keen and Lemma
Starling Give Account of Their New York Trip

Interesting and Instructive

On Wednesday, the twenty-fifth, the two delegates to the Convention of the Interscholastic Press Association at Columbia University had charge of the chapel exercises. The delegates spent a week in New York and a day in Washington. They told of their trip and the two-day Convention held at one of the world's largest universities. This was the first convention of its kind to be held at Columbia, though others have been held in other parts of the country. About two hundred delegates attended the convention. In the newspaper and magazine contest papers and magazines were entered from every state east of the Mississippi. For this reason we are especially proud that The Chatterbox received special mention from the large number of papers entered.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club had a meeting Wednesday of last week, at which there was a small attendance. Marvin Watson made a short talk, bringing out the advantages of being a member of the Dramatic Club. Ann Ferree read a lovely poem by Alfred Noyes, "The Two Painters." After some business the meeting adjourned.

At the next meeting a play in one act, "Suppressed Desires," will be given. This play is very humorous and should afford a great deal of entertainment to the club members and to the High School students, who are cordially invited. Miss Emily Swain will sing between scenes.

SPECIAL MENTION!

In the recent contest of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, The Chatterbox was one of four high school papers in Class B to be given "special mention." One hundred and seventy papers from high schools in states east of the Mississippi River were entered in the contest.

The prizes consisted of silver cups for the best, bronze shields of Columbia University for second best, and an embossed certificate for third best in each class. Class A was for schools with an attendance greater than 1,000; Class B, 500 to 1,000; and Class C, 500 or less.

The awards for Class B newspapers was as follows. First prize, "Co-ed Leader," Atlanta High School, Atlanta, Georgia; second prize, "High Life," Greensboro High School, Greensboro, North Carolina; third prize, "Spotlight," Coatesville High School, Coatesville, Pennsylvania.

While D. H. S. is pleased that The Chatterbox merited special mention this year, we shall be satisfied with nothing less than first prize next year. "Day by day, in every way, our paper is going to get better and better."

HIGH SCHOOL GLEE CLUB

Miss Robertson, our music teacher, has organized the Glee Club. She has had a chorus in the school for the last year, but this year she will have both Chorus and Glee Club. The club is composed of the best singers and workers in the Chorus; it now has a membership of about thirty.

THE WORLD FLIERS COMING TO DANVILLE

"Smiling Jack" Harding and Lowell Thomas Here
March 23

The Parent-Teacher Association of the High School hopes to bring the World Fliers to Danville on Monday, March twenty-third. "Smiling Jack" Harding, one of the six Magellans of the air, who made the first circumnavigation of the earth by airplane, and Lowell Thomas, official historian of the trip, will tell the remarkable story of the world flight.

They will be heard at the Tabernacle. Admission, fifty and seventy-five cents. Thrilling pictures, both in motion and color, will be used. Many of the "stills" were made by "Smiling Jack" personally as the world air cruisers visited the twenty-eight different countries.

Every D. H. S. student should make an effort to see these heroes and hear their story.

PRELIMINARY CONTEST IN DEBATE HELD AT H. S.

Lindsay Motley and Nathan Morgan Win

On Friday, March the thirteenth, the preliminary debating contest was held at the High School. The question debated was Resolved, "That the Virginia Constitution be amended, so as to enable the Legislature to issue $15,000,000 in bonds for our institutions of higher learning, so that they may meet the needs of the 20th century."

Lindsay Motley and Nathan Morgan were chosen as the team, with Swanson Lea as alternate. These debaters will represent Danville High in Lynchburg on April the third.

READING

How would you define your reading? To my mind there are exactly three types of reading. A person who reads the classics or good books of the famous authors could justly define his reading as a communion with great minds. He who reads good books, if not classics, but books from which he derives pleasure and no harm could define his reading as profitable enjoyment. But he who reads the cheap books, abounding in evil thoughts, and reads only for relaxation, should define his reading as stagnation. Which type of reader are you?

In the rush and hurry of our modern world we often neglect our reading. The average American business man reads for relaxation and the light novel or magazine really rests his mind. American, Cosmopolitan, and The Red Book are favorites. These magazines are all right in their way, but some more serious reading should be done along with this pleasurable light reading. But we are no captains of business, so we should need serious, thoughtful reading more than light, frivolous matter. What we read now will largely determine what we will read in later life. If we develop a taste for the better things of literature now, when we grow older than the cheap, the worthless, we will see in their true light.

If you were allowed to choose whether you would live in beautiful surroundings or dull, you would instantly choose the beautiful. But we are not allowed to make this choice for our bodies often. However, this choice is offered to our minds every day that we exist. Your mind can wander through the beauties of pure thought, beautiful expression, and high ideals, or it can become stagnant with the shoddy, the cheap side of life. Will you choose Dante, Chaucer, Shakespeare, Byron, and Bunyan for your companions, or will you walk the world with a yellow-back novel as your mental companion? Student, the choice is offered you. Make it wisely.

HONESTY

Does honesty pay? Sometimes we are tempted to answer in the negative, and with reason. When we see someone copy the answers from the book, and lead the class in grades, we are apt to question the value of honesty. Yet one thing stands out. Those who cheat may lead in grades but that is all. They lose their self-respect and the confidence of their fellow students. These are indeed great losses. Petty misdeeds in school may lead to the great crimes of the future. Even if this does not happen, yet the dishonest student is put at a disadvantage. He has a sneaky and demoralizing feeling; he feels that he has been weighed and found lacking. In fact, he really has.

The honest student, on the other hand, is at ease in his heart; he looks the world in the face with unflinching eyes. He is self-confident; he is highly respected by his fellow students. He may not lead the class in grades, but he knows that what he has was fairly gotten. Then comes that "grand and glorious feeling" of which the cartoonist speaks.

Does honesty pay? In view of these thoughts I am convinced that it does. If you have been accustomed to cheating, quit now. If you have not, never begin. In any event, keep in mind that wise and truthful thought, "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

DANVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

On the border of Ole Virginia,
Where the soft breezes blow,
There is where our thoughts are turning,
There is where we long to go.

Back to the birth of each memory,
And to the scenes of childhood;
Back to the red brick school-house
With the big, wide neighborhood.

POETRY

The majority of courses in poetry quite effectively kill for the student any further interest in the subject. It is an unfortunate habit; like destroying flowers and butterflies by tearing them to pieces to see how they're made. Poetry, to me, represents the highest and rarest aesthetic experiences of the human heart and mind. The approach to it should be through the same channel traveled by its creator, namely, his experience of the beauty and then his reactions to it. Yet, to understand poetry, its purpose, and its true significance one must acquire a taste for it, and then study it. It is not a mere pastime although the study of it is a delightful occupation for those who love it. It is not a more or less intellectual game, played by refined people in their leisure hours. It does not exist in order that it might be studied. On the contrary it is a natural and powerful art expressing the feeling shared by all mankind. It is life in rhythmical words.

For these reasons poetry should not be analyzed until it has been enjoyed. Poets mean for it to give pleasure, or that deeper and more solemn satisfaction called joy. Poetry is an experience, but the more you study it, the more it becomes a habit and a part of you.

To understand poetry is to have a considerable education—is one of the finest of arts, as well as a great personal gain in aesthetic experience.

We will always think of it,
Even in the midst of the fray;
Hail thee now, our dear old High,
Honor the Red and Gray.

Though the ages 'round thee gather,
We think only of the love and cheer
Which we found in Old Danville
town,
And to us it grows more dear.

D. H. S. BASKETBALL TEAM PLAYS IN WASHINGTON AND LEE TOURNAMENT

Danville High, John Marshall High of Richmond, and Virginia High of Bristol, were the survivors in the opening round of the Washington and Lee basket-ball tournament, which opened in the Washington and Lee gymnasium at Lexington on Thursday, March the fifth. D. H. S. eliminated Altavista by a score of 22-7; John Marshall defeated South Boston 32-8, and Bristol won over Staunton 25-19.

A RESUME OF 1925 SEASON OF FOOTBALL

Facing a hard schedule, the 1925 football season was opened on September twelfth with the initial practice on the North Danville field. Coach Lefty Wilson was in charge for the second year, with Coach Keck assisting him. The squad was not very large, since a few more than twenty-five reported for practice.

Ten of last year's letter men were numbered among the squad and a good many scrubs from last year reported.

The playing season opened when the Chatham team came to Danville. Both teams were handicapped by a muddy field. The Chatham team put up a good fight, but were defeated 24-0. Kerr Farley made the first touchdown of the season.

On the following Saturday the Red and Grey crushed the Reidsville team by the score of 33-0. The first team ran up the score and many substitutions were made. The visitors put up a determined fight, but were able to register only two first downs.

October tenth found the Red and Grey team in Leaksville. There they suffered the first defeat of the season, 7-6. The game was a fight from start to finish. The Danville team put up a better game than the score indicates.

The Danville team won their third victory when they defeated Altavista here by the score of 10-6.

Danville suffered the worst defeat of the season at the hand of the strong Lynchburg eleven. The final score was 48-7. Roland Farley ran about 65 yards for Danville's single touchdown.

Danville ended the season with two victories, defeating Martinsville 3-0 and South Boston 12-0.

DANVILLE DEFEATS LYNCHBURG

On Saturday, February twenty-eighth, Danville High defeated the fast quint of Lynchburg High 18 to 21 on the V. M. I. floor.

Since the details have been in the local papers of both cities, and have been so clearly stated, we are omitting them here.

This is the first time in the history of our athletics that we have defeated our ancient rival on a neutral floor. All who saw the game said the floor-work of our boys was unsurpassed. The ball was in our territory nearly all of the game. From the spectators' point of view it seemed impossible to play a better game. All did their part and the result was one of the best games ever staged between the high schools.

We just want the team to know how proud we are of them and their splendid sportsmanship.

BASEBALL AT D. H. S.

Tuesday, March tenth, Coach "Lefty" Wilson issued a call for the battery aspirants. This call was answered by ten pitchers and four catchers. There is only one member of last year's pitching staff on hand, but with a likely bunch of new material we should have a very formidable staff. The teams will probably be able to go on the field by Monday. With Roland Farley, Tom Davis, "Jew" Nolan, Hoffman Culpepper, Kerr Farley, Hinton Gwynn and Garland Harris of last year's team, Danville High School should be able to show as good if not a better team than she did last year.

WHY WE SHOULD SUPPORT OUR ATHLETIC TEAMS

One of the best ways, if not the best, for a school to gain the attention of the pupils is to produce good athletic teams. To do this the teams must be loyally supported by the students. Almost any school with an enrollment of five or six hundred pupils can produce good athletic teams if the players are only encouraged by having a crowd at the games. If the attendance is small no player can play his best, because he thinks that the school is not interested in the team, and that his time and energy are being wasted, therefore he does not play as hard as he would if a large crowd was present at the game.

Not only are you helping your school and team but you are also developing a good point in your character by supporting your teams, that is loyalty; if you are loyal to your team you will most likely be loyal to your friends.

If you have not attended the games recently, you will soon have your chance, for the baseball season is just "around the corner," and the prospects for a good team the coming year are better than they have been for several years.

OUR TEAM

Now listen, while I tell you

Of the team that surely will win,
The team that's not brand new,
But the team that's made of better men.

This is the High School team,
Composed of the best in the school;

And you may see us play and scheme
But we'll always play by rule.

We'll always play fair
And never a foul we'll make;
For this team plays on the square
And surely a pennant we'll take.

The players are old letter men,
Honesty and fair play their plan;
For this is the code of men,
This is the spirit of our clan.

—Frank Ferrell.

HEART THROBS

Dear Gin:

I would like to know how to get to school on time! How could I do it?

BABY BEN.

Dear Baby Ben:

You should have your mother spank you each night until you can't sit down; then stand up all night. You will not go to sleep standing up, and heing awake, you should get to school on time.

GIN RAINGER.

Dear Gin:

I am a little sixteen-year-old girl and have fallen desperately for Mr. Wilson. How can I make any time?

BROKEN-HEARTED.

Dear Broken-Hearted:

Mr. Wilson is a known D. H. S. sheik; his bald dome has shattered many a love-worn heart. I would suggest buying a plug of apple chewing tobacco and presenting it to him; that should make a favorable impression. Beware of Mr. Wilson's eyes, regardless of how you emerge from the trifling affair.

Don't shoot yourself.

GIN RAINGER.

All who are anxious for advice in personal affairs, especially love affairs, will write to Mr. Rainger, care of this paper; Mr. Rainger will gladly give advice on all matters. Mr. Rainger has had wide experience, being jilted thrice. As a matter of kindness he has consented to help D. H. S. students through The Chatterbox. So drop your letter in the box at Room 16.

PRELIMINARY CONTEST

The winners there will have the privilege of taking part in the State Contest which will be held at the University of Virginia in May.

We are expecting our boys not only to win over Lynchburg, but to carry off the honors at the University, also. Good luck to you, Lindsay and Nathan!

"THE WORLD IS WAIT- ING FOR THE SUNRISE"

(As Walt Whitman Would Have Written It.)

Down from the sky rides the moon,
Down into the waters
Rides the Moon.
The waters that the moon rides into
Are lazy.
Alas, alas, lazy waters.
It is June.
Not March, April, May,
July, August, September, October,
November, December, January,
Not even February—but—
June, June, June.

In a bed of blue shimmers the stars.
While I am calling, calling, calling
You.
But you hear me not for
You sleep and dream.
And while you dream the day comes
Streaming, streaming,
Comes the day streaming, not
Screaming or steaming, but streaming.
Wake up, wake up, wake up, wake up
And greet the hour.

Pounds of dew, tons of dew
On the roses

1. Thou shalt not chew gum in classes if thou canst not get away with it.
2. Six cigarettes a day shalt thou smoke and giveth thou the remaining ones to the Day brothers.
3. Thou shalt not roll the galloping ivories lest "Pink" shalt win all thy money.
4. Thou shalt not copy from thy neighbor's paper; thy book is safer.
5. Thou shalt not use the name of Shakespeare in vain, or Mrs. Hill will fink thee.
6. Thou shalt not put other things before thy studies, for thy teacher is a hard teacher and it peeveeth her for thou to come to class unprepared.
7. Thou shalt not use vile names liken unto Julian Meade and Hinton Gwynn, lest thy school shalt rise against thee.
8. Thou shalt not put thine own guilt on thy neighbor.
9. Thou shalt not covet thy pal's Ford, nor his girl, nor his stacomb, nor his good fortune in evading punishment.
10. Study with all thy zeal lest thy days here be prolonged.

THE TOURNAMENTS

The Danville Team played in both the Washington and Lee and University of Virginia Tournaments this season. We reached the semi-finals in both. At W. and L. we defeated Altavista the first day, and drew a tie the second. We were then matched with Jefferson High, of Roanoke, who eliminated us by the score of 25 to 15; but all agreed that it was the best game of the Tournament, and that the passing and floor-work of the Danville team was wonderful. Roanoke won the State High School Championship.

In the Virginia Tournament we reached the semi-finals by defeating Lynchburg at V. M. I., and by Bristol High forfeiting to us. We are now champions of three counties, or the Western District.

Runt Taylor, left guard, made All-State running guard, second team.

Virginia High School Literary Contest

IN THE preliminary contest of the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League, held in Lynchburg on April 3rd, Danville defeated Lynchburg in Debate and Boy's Reading.

Lindsay Motley and Nathan Morgan, the successful debaters, and Julian Meade, the reader, entered the final contest at Charlottesville on May the 8th and 9th as contestants for the State Championship.

The results of the Charlottesville contest were as follows:

In Boy's Reading, Danville was successful in the preliminaries and finals and won the State Championship for 1924 and 1925.

In Debate, the team from Danville defeated the strong teams of Norfolk, Fredericksburg, and Charlottesville in the preliminaries and semi-finals, but lost the State Championship for City High Schools to Petersburg in the finals by a 2-to-1 decision.

Alumni Notes

ANY things have happened since the Class of '24 held sway at Danville High. We are glad to say that the majority of our class have seen fit to continue their education; we wish that all of them could have done so. The others are somewhat scattered: two or three are back at the high school, some are working at home and in other cities, and three have married. I shall try to give you a brief account of my classmates, where they are and what they are doing. I shall begin with the happiest ones—those who have married—Polly Carter was married to Mr. Clifton Bernard in October, 1924. We congratulate Mr. Bernard on getting one of the sweetest young ladies in our class. Katherine Rucker decided that she preferred above all else to paint pictures of one man, so, after her marriage, she moved to New York. Grace Gentry was also content to become a young house wife; she married Mr. Berkley Edwards.

The following are working at home and elsewhere; Dow Cooley is with a concern in West Virginia. He expects to attend William and Mary next year. We know that he will make good anywhere. Margaret Withers is working at home. She was such a good student in high school that we hope she can continue her education. Julian Adams has a position with a tobacco company in Danville. He is the same old ladies' man. Robert Bousman has a position with the city. This fact alone would make Danville a good place. Evelyn Warren is keeping house; perhaps she expects to carry out the honor that her class gave her. Ida Mandle is a progressive typist; her office is in the Masonic temple. Bessie Ramsey is now a promising stenographer; she is working for Mr. Pryor Ragland. Henry Lea will no doubt soon be a junior partner in his father's furniture business. Bits Ruffin is making a fine record with the American Tobacco Company. He expects to attend Washington and Lee next year. Helen Stephens is teaching school. Her only fault, as a teacher, is that she is too good to the pupils.

The following members of our class are in college: Alice Schofield is at Harrisonburg Normal, studying hard as she always did at high school. Helen Cadwallader was not satisfied with the schools near home so she went to Ohio; she is making good grades as usual. Katherine Gallagher, on the contrary, likes to stay at home so well that she did not go any farther than Averett College. George S. Hughes is at the University of Virginia. We hope he will make a fine record there. Hortense Eanes is writing poems, playing the violin, and of course, studying at Harrisonburg Normal. Louise Hill is a very popular young lady at Harrisonburg. Bill Barr, the dignified freshman at the University of Richmond will be a noted professor or lawyer soon. Earl Rucker has followed the footsteps of his father and is a cadet at V. M. I. Helen Booth is a Latin shark at Harrisonburg; if she is not, she should be. John Henry Lea (that descendant of General Lee) is studying diligently at V. P. I. He was always a studious boy. Champe Broaddus, that sheik of Danville High, is at the University of Virginia. The two country girls are at Farmville. Mary is as mischievous as ever, but that is why we all liked her. Katherine had to leave school for an operation, and will not be able to return this year. We hope she will soon be well and able to go back. Alger Turner wanted to graduate from an old school so he went to William and Mary. He likes Mary very much so we have heard!

Janie Gammon is as studious as ever. She is at Harrisonburg. James Bruce heard so much about Georgia peaches that he went all the way to the University of Georgia to see them and incidentally to study. Alna Lockwood is still making those high grades that she used to make in high school. She is at Harrisonburg. Gladys Poe is leading the yells at Farmville. We still remember how the boys fell for her. George Franklin is the same old athlete at Washington and Lee that he was at Danville High. Red Wilson is making a name for himself at V. M. I. Olivia Mobley (the dignified editor of the Cardinal) is a popular young lady at St. Mary's, Raleigh, N. C. She could not be otherwise than popular. Johnny Weber, the most popular boy of the Class of '24, is at Trinity, continuing his education. He is doing splendid work, and is working for his old high school position, business manager of the college paper. We know he will be successful in this venture. Even though John is no longer with us, we still work him. He is alumni editor of THE CARDINAL. It is rumored that he visits St. Mary's occasionally. We wonder why? Of course, we must say something of Mr. Hall and Miss Anthony. Mr. Hall is studying for his doctor's degree at Harvard. Miss Anthony is head of the English department at Concord State Normal, Athens, West Virginia.

I have written this brief account of the members of the Class of '24 because we believe that you are interested in us, and may I say, in behalf of my class, that we are interested in the success that you are making and that our hearts are always with our old Danville High School.

Last Will and Testament

E, the dignified Seniors of the Danville High school of the Class of 1925, do solemnly and impartially administer the following things by means of this, our last will and testament.

To the juniors we administer the multitude of joys attached to the life of a Senior, and we also bequeath to them Room 16, with everything in it.

To the teams we will all possible success.

To Mr. Ralston we leave seventy-five pounds of flesh.

To Mr. Poindexter we leave the assurance that he is one of the most popular teachers in the faculty. Along with our love we leave a bottle of Mellin's Food and some reducing tablets (on condition that he share with Miss Grace Bagly).

To Miss Grace we leave the hope that she may find someone to take Sis' Hyla's place—preferably a gentleman.

To Jessie Hylton, Anne Ferree wills her brains and ability as a vampire.

To Bennie Hessburg Edwards (although departed) Julian wills his enormous feet and dramatic ability.

To Miss E. Lura Moore (from Missouri, you know) we leave a bottle of baloney hair dressing and a large book bag.

To Jake Giles we leave the ardent hope that he may become a great ladies' man—like unto Eddie Rosenstock.

To the high school cigarette "bummers" (you know who they are), we leave some Chesterfields.

We leave the building to the insurance companies of Danville to be used as an example of a perfect fire trap.

As usual, we leave Pink a few thousand Chatterboxes to keep the furnace going.

We leave the cafeteria to the feeble minded and the slow moving who can't get home to dinner.

We leave William Blair a bottle of hair restorer—poor Vic.

Betty Travis leaves her laziness to all who desire it. We assure the students there will be plenty to go around, and there need be no rush for it.

Joe leaves his pep and foolishness to Julia Davis. With what she already has and with what she will get from Joe, all we can say is may the Fates help the school teachers.

IN setting the type, printing, and binding this book, our object was not to see how quickly and cheaply we could produce the publication, but how well it could be done.

Our whole aim in this, as in all our work, is to give the greatest attention to all the details, and produce printing that will be a credit to the institutions from which the publications are issued. Our books will be just as good in the many years to come, when an annual is of greatest value, as they are to-day.
